

Memorial Day

General John A. Logan's
Memorial Day Order

General Order No. 11
Headquarters, Grand Army of the Republic
Washington, D.C., May 5, 1868

I. The 30th day of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, and hamlet churchyard in the land. In this observance no form or ceremony is prescribed, but posts and comrades will in their own way arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances may permit.

We are organized, comrades, as our regulations tell us, for the purpose, among other things, "of preserving and strengthening those kind and fraternal feelings which have bound together the soldiers, sailors, and marines who united to suppress the late rebellion." What can aid more to assure this result than by cherishing tenderly the memory of our heroic dead, who made their breasts a barricade between our country and its foes? Their soldier lives were the reveille of freedom to a race in chains, and their death a tattoo of rebellious tyranny in arms. We should guard their graves with sacred vigilance. All that the consecrated wealth and taste of the Nation can add to their adornment and security is but a fitting tribute to the memory of her slain defenders. Let no wanton foot tread rudely on such hallowed grounds. Let pleasant paths invite the coming and going of reverent visitors and fond mourners. Let no vandalism of avarice or neglect, no ravages of time, testify to the present or to the coming generations that we have forgotten, as a people, the cost of free and undivided republic.

If other eyes grow dull and other hands slack, and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it well as long as the light and warmth of life remain in us.

Let us, then, at the time appointed, gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with choicest flowers of springtime; let us raise above them the dear old flag they saved from dishonor; let us in this solemn presence renew our pledges to aid and assist those whom they have left among us as sacred charges upon the Nation's gratitude,—the soldier's and sailor's widow and orphan.

II. It is the purpose of the Commander-in-Chief to inaugurate this observance with the hope it will be kept up from year to year, while a survivor of the war remains to honor the memory of his departed comrades. He earnestly desires the public press to call attention to this Order, and lend its friendly aid in bringing it to the notice of comrades in all parts of the country in time for simultaneous compliance therewith.

III. Department commanders will use every effort to make this order effective.

By command of:

JOHN A. LOGAN,
Commander-in-Chief.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Adjutant-General.

The Unknown Dead

THE UNKNOWN DEAD

ABOVE their rest there is no sound of weeping,
Only the voice of song-birds thrills the air;
Unknown their graves, yet they are in God's keeping,
There are none "missing" from His tender care.

He knows each hallowed mound, and at His pleasure
Marshalls the sentinels of earth and sky;
O'er their repose kind Nature heaps her treasure,
Fanned by soft winds which 'round them gently sigh.

Bravely they laid their all upon the altar,
Counting as naught the sacrifice and pain,
Theirs but to do and die without a falter —
Ours to enjoy the victory and the gain.

They are not lost; that only which was mortal
Lies 'neath the turf o'erarched by Southern skies;
Deathless they wait beyond the heavenly portal,
In that fair land where valor never dies.

In the great heart of coming generations
Their fame shall live, their glory never cease;
Even when comes to all earth's troubled nations
God's perfect gift of universal peace.

Edward Black, Mar 30, 1857 - June 26, 1872
 Fullerton-Jew (Richmond, Indiana), 67 Mar 2011, Mar, page 1-4, by Steve Martin
 8-year-old was youngest soldier in war
 Wayne Co. native served honorably in Civil War as drummer boy, died at age 15
 The youngest soldier of the Civil War was born in Wayne County. His name was Edward Black.
 Historically the average recruit was a white native-born, single, Protestant male farmer between the ages of 18 and 20 who stood about 5 feet, 7 inches tall and weighed about 147 pounds.
 Edward Black was a white native-born Protestant child.
 At a time when about 1 million soldiers were fighting - 2 million from the North and about 1 million from the South - the youngest of all from either side was a boy from ...
 Hagerstown.
 Edward Black was born there on Mar. 30, 1857. He was the son of George and Lydia Black, who later moved to Indianapolis.
 At 8 years and 2 months of age in third-grade by today's standards, little Edward enlisted in the Union army on July 24, 1861, and was assigned to the 21st Indiana Regiment as a drummer boy.
 Drummer boys had been used before and during the Revolutionary war to maintain a "pace" or rhythm for marching or changing a line. They were often out in front of advancing troops and were easy targets. The enemy would aim at them in order to cause the advancing line to fall out of step.
 Though drummer boys did not fight, they often waded into battle anyway.
 Whether they fought or not, they just as often paid the ultimate penalty.
 In the Union army it was estimated that 500,000 soldiers were younger than 15 years old.
 Wayne County from Edward Black was the youngest child on record in the Union and the Confederate armies, and also the youngest enlisted soldier in all other American wars.
 His service record was exemplary.
 He "historically served one year, two months and five days, being honorably discharged when his replacement discharged." During his time in the army he was captured in the battle of Baton Rouge and held prisoner at Ship Island. At the capture of New Orleans (upon being released), young Black's head marched into the city playing the tune "Yankee"
 In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the war of drummer boys since so many were needlessly being slaughtered.
 Edward came back home to Indianapolis, but he didn't stay long.
 He re-enlisted with his father immediately, still very much under age. He and his father served until war's end.
 In his military career, little Edward was shot at several times and taken prisoner once. He survived the Civil War as a veteran, at the ripe old age of 11.
 When he returned home at the end of the conflict, he was physically and mentally depleted.
 Never having fully recovered from the traumatic experience, he died in 1872 at the age of 15.
 He is buried in Section 18, Lot 148 of the Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis. The record there states: "The youngest soldier in the Civil War, and probably of all American wars, is buried under a weather-beaten limestone marker in Crown Hill. This soldier, Edward Black, was
